

The Journal of Human Behavior in the Social Environment helps social workers firmly grasp developing issues in human behavior theories. It provides an outlet for empirically based articles about human behavior theory that facilitate social workers' practice goals. This innovative journal is the first to address the complexities of human behavior in relation to social work and its relevancy to practice. This makes it an essential resource for classes in human behavior in the social environment. Articles provide you with groundbreaking, up-to-date information on developments in empirically based human behavior theory. They address conceptual and empirical foci which study human behavior as a complex phenomenon. Supported theories target specific behaviors for change, possess clarity by describing in detail the intended change(s), predict the change(s), and facilitate the desired behavioral change(s) through implementation of the model theory.

SPECIAL THEME CALL FOR MANUSCRIPTS

TOPIC: POLICE SHOOTING OF UNARMED AFRICAN AMERICAN MALES: IMPLICATIONS FOR THE INDIVIDUAL, FAMILY, AND THE COMMUNITY

This interdisciplinary special theme issue of The Journal of Human Behavior in the Social Environment is dedicated to scholarly contributions, practice wisdom, solution-based, and evidence-based community interventions that are effective in addressing the perennial disproportionality of police brutality, and killings of African American males. The special issue editors welcome manuscript submissions that address police shooting of unarmed African American males and explain how the confluence and intersections of historic, contemporary, socioeconomic, legal, and political factors contribute to social inequities against African American males and their interactions with law enforcement agents. Manuscripts that consider the aforementioned factors and their implications for African American males at the individual, family and/or community level will be considered. Empirical (quantitative), qualitative, mixed method theoretical, conceptual, and synthesized (literature/systematic reviews, or meta-analyses) manuscripts are welcomed.
